

By Indirections Find Directions Out

Mark Ratner

Northwestern Univ.

ABSTRACT: The increasing usage of fossil fuels, coupled with the increase in the population of the world, presents challenges for humanity. The molecular approach to this issue has been to use molecules selected for their physical properties. We will discuss some concepts that are relevant to improvement of molecular solar cells. These include organics and hybrid molecules. Finally, we will develop a single number to characterize the quality of particular components.